

Jeffrey W. Spaulding

Business Law
Innovative Enterprise Program

Associate

Jeff advises companies in all stages of development, through formation, private financings, securities offerings, strategic partnerships, and mergers and acquisitions. He works with financial institutions on regulatory compliance and complex commercial financings. Jeff has a particular interest in emerging companies in high-growth technology sectors and frequently advises them on financing, structuring, and securities matters throughout their growth.

Jeff chairs the Eaton Peabody Innovative Enterprise Program - a relatively recent initiative through which we allow selected startup and emerging companies with significant expansion potential to defer the majority of their legal fees until a debt or equity financing or other liquidity event.

While in law school, Jeff served as a Technical Editor for the New England Law Review. He also received the New England Scholar Award, the CALI award for Future Excellence in Antitrust Law, and clerked for the Honorable David A. Lowy of the Massachusetts Superior Court.
